Scope The Asia Pacific Management Review (APMR) is a double-blind peer-reviewed international journal founded in 1996. Each of four regular issues (March, June, September, and December) published each year contains high quality, original papers and/or short communications that contribute to the theory, methodology and/or practice of management. In addition to demonstrating their research rigor and relevance to the existing state of knowledge, papers published in APMR provide new ideas, new insights, new empirical results and/or new practical applications significant to the field of management. APMR publishes scholarly papers and short communications in all aspects of management. (source)
